Key Findings & Highlights

Cognizant started its process automation practice in 2012 when it set up a COE to standardize and improve its automation capabilities while bringing those skills to clients. The automation work at that time, focused on RPA only, was linked to the BPO work Cognizant was delivering to its large institutional clients. Since then, it has expanded its automation services to include AI and cognitive services.

Cognizant has since inception installed thousands of BOTs and automated processes across industries for its clients.
