Key Findings & Highlights

This NelsonHall vendor assessment analyzes Totara's learning platform.

Totara began as a startup in 2011 in New Zealand. It aimed to give organizations the freedom to shape their learning and development choices through an open-source ethos. In 2023, Totara enables talent development around the globe, with its products used to train millions of users.

Totara started as an LMS: fundamentally the core platform deployed with most clients. The Totara Talent Experience Platform was launched in 2020 and comprises three core modules: Learn, Engage, and Perform, which offer a continuum of increasingly complex features and functionality which can be switched on according to an organization's needs and learning maturity.

Buyers (of all organizational sizes) looking for a modular, scalable (up to 1m+ users), and cost-effective learning platform, which can be configured to local requirements through a network of carefully allocated expert partners, should consider Totara's Talent Experience Platform.
